

ZEPHYR

Department of English

1. The Brave Soldiers of India

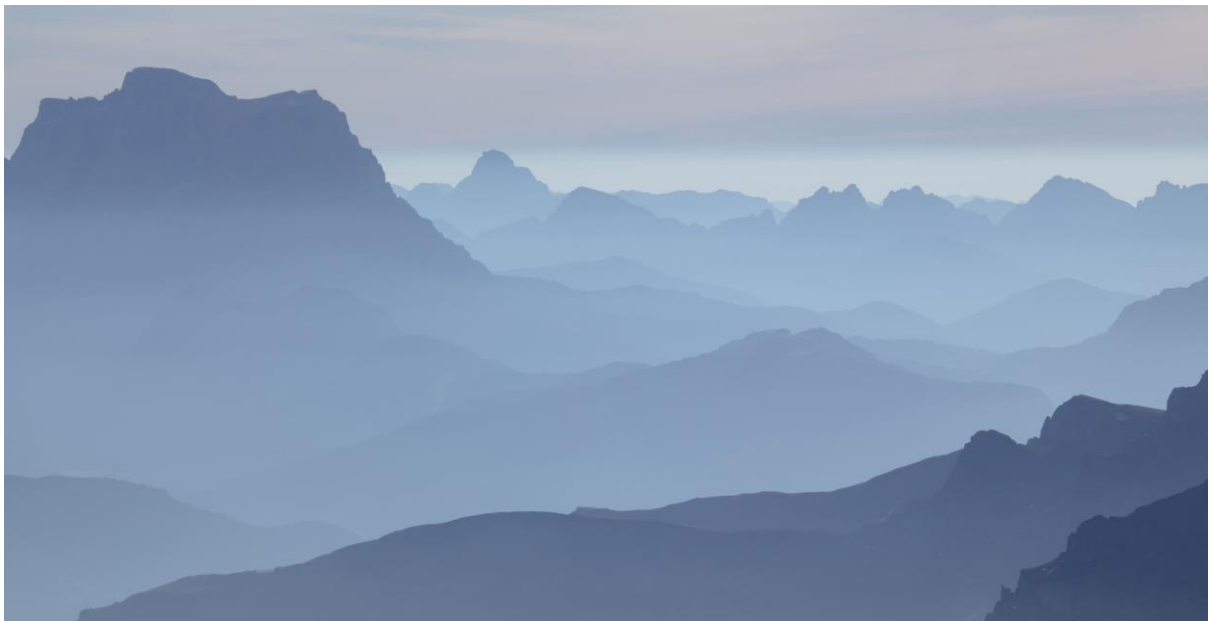

In a small village nestled among green fields and tall mountains, there lived a young boy named Raj. Raj loved hearing stories about the Indian Army from his grandfather. Every evening, Grandpa would sit with Raj and tell him tales of the brave soldiers who stood tall, guarding their beloved country.

One sunny morning, as Raj was playing with his toy soldiers, he heard the distant sound of drums and bugles. Curious, he rushed outside and saw a grand parade. It was the Indian Army, marching with pride and honour. Raj's eyes sparkled with excitement.

Raj was eager to learn more, so Grandpa shared another story with him. It was about a soldier named Captain Aarav. Captain Aarav and his team were stationed high up in the snowy mountains near the border. They faced icy winds and heavy snow, but they never gave up. One winter, a terrible storm hit the mountains. The people in a nearby village were trapped, and their houses were buried under snow. Captain Aarav and his team knew they had to help. They battled the storm and reached the village, bringing food, blankets, and hope. The villagers cheered and thanked the soldiers for their bravery.

Raj was amazed by Captain Aarav's courage. He said, "Grandpa, when I grow up, I want to be a brave soldier like Captain Aarav and protect our country too!"

Grandpa patted Raj's head and said, "That's a wonderful dream, my dear. Remember, the Indian Army stands for bravery, unity, and love for our country. They protect us so we can live in peace."

2. Himalayas So High

Himalayas, mountains tall,
Rising high, standing tall.
Snowy peaks, rivers flow,
In their beauty, they aglow.

Mysteries deep, stories old,
In their shadow, legends told.
Himalayas, pure and grand,
In our hearts, you'll forever stand.

3. A Memorable Visit to Darjeeling

Darjeeling, often referred to as the "Queen of the Hills," is a picturesque hill station in the Indian state of West Bengal. My recent visit to Darjeeling was a truly memorable experience, filled with natural beauty, cultural richness, and delightful adventures.

First and foremost, the breathtaking scenery in Darjeeling is what left the strongest impression on me. The town is nestled amidst rolling hills covered with lush tea gardens, which create a soothing green carpet that stretches as far as the eye can see. The sight of the sunrise over the Kanchenjunga Mountain, the third highest peak in the world, was absolutely mesmerizing. The rays of the sun slowly kissing the snow-capped peaks painted the sky in shades of pink and orange – a view I will cherish forever.

Darjeeling's rich cultural heritage also fascinated me. The town is a melting pot of diverse cultures, with a blend of Indian, Tibetan, and Nepali influences. I had the chance to visit the Peace Pagoda, a serene Buddhist temple that offered a glimpse into the spiritual side of Darjeeling. The colorful prayer flags fluttered in the wind, and the peaceful ambiance made it a truly tranquil experience.

One of the highlights of my trip was the iconic Darjeeling Himalayan Railway, also known as the "Toy Train." This UNESCO World Heritage Site took me on a scenic ride through the hills, passing through charming villages, dense forests, and picturesque tea gardens. It was like a journey back in time, as the vintage steam engine chugged along, offering breathtaking views at every turn.

Another delightful aspect of my visit was indulging in the local cuisine. Darjeeling is famous for its momos, a type of dumpling, and delicious cups of Darjeeling tea. I couldn't resist trying both, and they did not disappoint. The momos were savory, and the tea had a unique, aromatic flavor that was a true treat for my taste buds.

In conclusion, my visit to Darjeeling was a blend of natural beauty, cultural diversity, and unforgettable experiences. The scenic landscapes, the rich culture, the toy train ride, and the delicious food made this trip an enriching and enjoyable adventure. Darjeeling truly lives up to its reputation as the "Queen of the Hills," and I look forward to returning to this charming hill station someday.